CONTENTS vs STRUCTURE

In the context of a property loss, "contents" refers to the personal belongings and movable items within a building, while "structure" encompasses the physical building itself, including its foundation, walls, roof, and permanent fixtures.

Here's a more detailed explanation:

Contents:

- Includes items like furniture, appliances, electronics, clothing, and other personal items.
- For commercial properties, it also includes business equipment, office supplies, and maintenance equipment.
- Contents insurance, also known as business personal property insurance, covers these movable items.

Structure:

- Refers to the physical building, including its foundation, walls, roof, and any permanent fixtures like flooring, countertops, and cabinetry.
- Also includes other structures on the property, such as fences, sheds, or garages.
- Structural insurance, or dwelling coverage, helps protect the physical structure of the home.

Please only upload images of the selected damage. You will be able to add additional documentation (receipts or invoices) later in the questionnaire.

What's Next

Once your claim has been reported a examiner will contact you to discuss the cause and extent of your damages. You may need to take steps to prevent further loss or damages. A field inspection may be required to determine the extent and nature of the damage.

If it is determined that the responsible party caused the loss, and that the damages are related, then Payment or Settlement will be made to the proper party.

If your injury or the damage to your property was due to the actions of a third party vendor your claim may be tendered to them for handling. If that is the case, you will receive notification that this has occurred along with complete contact information for the responsible party.

You can obtain status on your claim through the following methods:

Email/Texts:
 If you'd like us to email and/or text you with updates when something changes on your claim, let your examiner know and we'll get you enrolled. You can also enroll in mySedgwick by navigating to your Personal Notifications in Account Settings.
